The All Star Comedy Revue

Five of comedy's freshest faces performed stand up for troops stationed in Southwest Asia.

Washington, D.C. (August 11, 2011) – Armed Forces Entertainment sent comedians Tyler Craig, Nema Williams, D'Lai, Frankie Quinones and Rob Maher to entertain the U.S. troops stationed in the Middle East. The comics performed stand up, signed autographs, posed for pictures and extended their gratitude to the men and women in uniform.

Craig is not just a comedian, he is an actor and has starred in five stage plays, three independent films and is currently featured on BET's hit new sitcom, Somebodies. Williams has appeared on Cedric the Entertainer's Starting Lineup and Sean Combs' Bad Boys of Comedy on HBO. Former soldier, D'Lai, discovered his talent as a comedian while dealing Black Jack in Louisiana while Quinones made a name for himself on the San Francisco scene and recently hosted the Latin Kings of Comedy tour. Maher got his comedic start in D.C. as a movie critic for MHZ's Megahertz, where he interviewed some of today's biggest stars, including Chris Rock and Jamie Presley.
