Country Artist Can't Get Enough

Barry Michael headed on second trip to entertain U.S. troops stationed overseas

Washington, D.C. (July 6, 2012) – Armed Forces Entertainment is pleased to have country music recording artist Barry Michael, entertaining troops for the second time in three months. Michael is visiting troops in Greenland, AUTEK, Hawaii and Curacao now until July 10. Michael will perform original songs and classic favorites and make plenty of time to sign autographs and pose for pictures.

In April, Michael brought smiles and good times to those serving in the Middle East. Michael's reasoning for wanting to tour with Armed Forces Entertainment again is simple. "I have way more reasons to go than excuses not to go. I'm honored to do it and I'd be lying if I told you I didn't like it. I'm a bit of a thrill seeker," he says. Michael will take something very special with him on the trip that will be a touch of home and provide additional comfort during his 20-hour flight. "I'll be taking my daughter's Panda Pillow Pad. It's a pillow that I can wrap around my carry-on and use to get some decent sleep during the trip."

Michael, who was born and raised in Atlanta, Georgia, is a down-home, Southern charmer with a signature deep, twangy voice. His latest single, Uncountrify Me, can be found on the album "Ripped Blue Jeans and ATVs."
