No Need to Knock the Dust of Your Boots

The Jeremy Graham Band brings a taste of Country to our troops in Europe.

Washington, D.C. (June 13, 2011) – Armed Forces Entertainment proudly presents the Jeremy Graham Band (JGB) to entertain our troops stationed in Europe. The band, which hails from Augusta, GA, will be going “wheels up” on their second tour for Armed Forces Entertainment on June 17th. Their three-week engagement will take them to play-dates in Germany, the Netherlands, Bosnia and Kosovo. Two years ago they performed for military personnel stationed in Tokyo, Japan.

JGB was first organized in 2005 and consists of six members on stage, with three others in supporting roles. Three members are veterans: one is a retired Navy Chief, another is a former Navy submariner, and one other is a former Air Force computer specialist. Together they make up a hard-working band that is booked constantly throughout the year. Some of the members have worked together for over 14 years. Over the past three years, they have had the privilege of opening for some of the most talented entertainers in Country Music, including Jason Aldean, Kellie Pickler and Darryl Worley.

“No matter where we play in the States, nothing can top a tour with AFE,” says lead singer and band namesake Jeremy Graham. “It is a privilege to meet with and play for our troops overseas. They are sacrificing everything for us, and we feel it’s our job to bring a little bit of home out to them.” Retired Navy Chief Mike Burress adds, “I’ll always remember how special it was to have entertainers from the States come over to put on a show for us. And it thrills me to think that I am on the other end now; I can entertain them.”

The current tour ends with a big 4th of July concert and festival in Bamberg, Germany. After that the band flies home for a much-deserved rest.
